

HEALTH HAZARDS

1851

(No. 3 October 1992)

INTRODUCTION

1851.1

(No. 3 October 1992)

During the course of their duties, CAL FIRE employees may be exposed to health hazards such as infectious diseases, heat and cold extremes, air pollution, noise, and plant or animal hazards. In order to provide CAL FIRE employees with the safest working environment possible, the following section describes safety precautions and work practices for handling, preventing, or avoiding these hazards. Supervisors must ensure that employees follow appropriate safety precautions and work practices to avoid health hazards.
