To comply with federal and state policies, laws, and regulations, all regions must establish an asbestos management program. Since the federal and state governments have determined that airborne asbestos contamination is a significant environmental problem, the presence of asbestos in buildings may create a potential health hazard to occupants if special precautions are not taken during building renovations, maintenance, repairs, or other activities.

Technical Services will provide coordination and technical assistance for this program. Administrative units should request assistance from the region engineer or staff assigned to coordinate this program.
