

GENERAL

3510

(No. 1 June 1991)

In California, the Governor is responsible for budget formulation. However, the budget is actually a product of all levels of state government. While legislative and administrative heads make crucial decisions on specific questions raised in the budget process, they are dependent on the information presented to them. Everyone involved in the budget process must aspire to the creation of a meaningful, well developed, and fully justified financial plan, and expect the review process to catch all flaws and shortcomings.
