In California, there continues to be a great demand for the state's timber resources by consumers, loggers, and landowners. Through more complete utilization practices, both in harvesting and processing, it is possible to extend California timber resources. The FPU program provides technical assistance to any individual or company dealing with forest products. These services are provided in accordance with PRC §4671, which authorizes the department to engage in and demonstrate methods of developing, using, and protecting the forest and wildland resources of the state.
